The long-awaited University Football League returns today in the quarter final stage with former champions Makerere University Business School (MUBS) and Uganda Martyrs University Nkozi renewing their rivalry.

The two sides have built up a rivalry following their previous meetings in the 2015 and 2017 Nile Special University Football League final and their game today promises to be a mouth-watering clash. In 2015, MUBS smashed UMU 4-0 to lift the trophy but UMU got their pound of flesh in 2017 with a 2-0 victory in the final played at Namboole stadium.

Today's quarter-final is a repeat of the 2017 final and the hosts are out to avenge the 2-0 defeat that denied them a second trophy.

"UMU is a strong side, but the 2017 loss to them still rings in our memory and we are out to erase that with a win," MUBS tactician Charles Ayeikho said.

MUBS skipper Martin Ssenyondo said that whereas history favours them, they are not taking anything for granted and will attack the opponents right from the beginning. Coach Ayeikho added that his boys have been playing in the Masaza tournament and have got more game time and exposure which gives him confidence ahead of today's quarterfinal.
